The National Science Foundation (NSF) aims to ensure the vitality of the human resource base of science, mathematics, and engineering in the United States and to reinforce its diversity. To that end in March 2003, the NSF will award approximately 900 new three-year Graduate Research Fellowships. NSF Fellows are expected to contribute significantly to research, teaching, and industrial applications in science, mathematics, and engineering. These contributions, in turn, will broadly impact society and the community.

The information requested on the application materials is solicited pursuant to the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended. The information you supply will be used to determine eligibility, to correlate application materials, to assist reviewers in evaluating qualifications of applicants, to select NSF Fellows and to administer the NSF fellowships. Failure to provide full and complete information necessary for eligibility determination or for evaluation of qualifications may reduce the possibility of your receiving a fellowship award. For more information, see the section on "Privacy Act and Public Burden Statements" later in this document and in the Guidelines for Submission of Applications, which can be downloaded at http://www.nsf.gov/grfp.
